BEEHIVE FENCE PROJECT

At about 15:00, we set off to the Maasai Village of Tinga Tinga, where guests will learn more of this little town and its people. Tinga Tinga's farmlands are often destroyed by elephants crossing over them - a situation causing a serious human-elephant conflict, sometimes even resulting in fatalities on either side.

Lucy King, renowned Kenyan researcher, discovered a brilliant solution: A Beehive Fence, consisting of hanging beehives connected by wire. As elephants instinctively avoid the African Honeybee, farmlands enclosed by such a beehive fence will be spared.

Take the opportunity to add one beehive to the fence with your travel group at an additional cost, thereby contributing towards the safety of villagers and elephants. The brand-new beehive sponsored by your group will carry your signature and leave a lasting legacy. After mounting the hive, you will be invited inside the village to learn more about the Maasai, and your guide, a Maasai himself, will explain more about the decision of one of the world's last nomadic tribes to settle.

After hearing interesting accounts and fascinating stories, you will be taken to a beautiful spot to enjoy the breath-taking sunset, while drinks and snacks will be served. Driving back to Shu'mata in total darkness, surrounded by the African starry sky. Departing with the knowledge that you contributed towards a sustainable solution for Tinga Tinga: saving elephants, creating a new occupation for the local Maasai as beekeepers, who thus have a way of earning income by selling the honey, and building homes for the pollinators we all depend on. Take the opportunity to buy a few jars of honey to take home and give as a personalised gift to your friends and family.
