Bazaruto Archipelago, Mozambique

An adventure island

The second largest island of the Bazaruto Archipelago, Benguerra offers exceptional opportunities to explore some of the very best of Mozambique's magnificent marine life and experience an abundance of island adventures.

DISCOVER THE BAZARUTO ARCHIPELAGO

Why visit the Bazaruto Archipelago?

Mozambique itself is not an island, however, just off its balmy southern shores lies a collection of small, idyllic islands that make up the achingly beautiful Bazaruto Archipelago.

1

PROTECTED MARINE CONSERVATION AREA

Characterised by its towering sand dunes, inland lakes and pristine beaches, beautiful Bengueria Island forms part of a group of tropical islands which were declared a national park in 1971. The others include Santa Carolina, Bangué, Magaruque, and Bazaruto.

2

EASY ACCESSIBILITY

Vilanculos in Mozambique is easily accessible from South Africa. Just a short 1h30 min flight with SA Airlink will ensure you don't miss your breakfast in Johannesburg, but still arrive in the beautiful Bazaruto Archipelago in time for lunch. From the airport, a helicopter transfer to your accommodation reveals the dreamlike mirage of impossibly white sand dunes and endless shades of turquoise water not far below.

3

DIVERSITY OF MARINE LIFE

The waters that lap the archipelago brim with an array of reef fish, sea turtles and game fish. Numerous endangered marine species have also been documented here, such as whale sharks, manta rays, leatherback turtles, humpback whales and the very rare dugong.

4

BEAUTIFUL BEACHES

Mozambique has remained an exclusive destination as many of its islands and mainland beaches are isolated and secluded, offering guests the ultimate escape. There are no golf courses or shopping malls here. It's the unspoiled natural beauty and rich marine life that have pushed the country to the top of the list for honeymooners, scuba divers and water sports fanatics. Soft, white sand beaches lined with coconut palms stretch as far as the eye can see.
