Weather: The weather of Cusco is defined by two seasons: rainy and dry. Rainy season typically runs November through March with average temperatures around 56°F (13.3°C). Occasional showers are expected throughout this period, with the heaviest rains often occurring in January and February. Dry season is normally April through October, during which time we expect to see mostly sunny days followed by cooler nights and the possibility of morning frost. Average daytime temperature around this time is 49.5°F (9.7°C), while July is regularly recorded as the coldest month of the year. In some locations night temps can drop down as low as 32°F (0°C). It is important to keep in mind that Cusco is located in a high mountain environment where variable weather is the norm. Rain can occur in the middle of July just as sun may appear in January, so it is always important to be prepared for mixed conditions.
