A dream coming to life

Two sisters and their partners always had a love for travel. While originally residing in the Netherlands, occasionally visiting Africa, the dream of building up a luxury lodge in South Africa gained shape.

Bags were packed and the journey was set to find the most beautiful piece of South Africa. More specifically, the dream was to be off the beaten track, rather undiscovered and full of luscious vegetation and wild animals. The area that ticked all these boxes was the beautiful UNESCO Waterberg Biosphere, with its endless waterstreams, never-ending mountainous views, and a high number of (Big 5) animals. Quite naturally marked by UNESCO as a world Heritage Site in 2001. The close proximity to Johannesburg (2 hours drive) and being in a malaria-free area were a big plus.

By the end of 2021, our team of four found the perfect locations in this region and travelled the 8,000 miles (13,000 kilometers) from their home in the Netherlands to the 'Mother Continent' to build the mutual dream.
