completely devoid of game. Illegal poaching and uncontrolled legal hunting had resulted in the collapse of the wildlife population. In 2002, the Grumeti Community and Wildlife Conservation Fund was formed: a non-profit organisation dedicated to community-based work, anti-poaching and development. The Grumeti Fund has established a number of schools and sustainable agricultural projects and in just under a decade the Fund team, Singita Grumeti Reserve guests and others have – through their hard work, dedication and donations – helped restore the vast majority of Singita Grumeti Reserves resident wildlife population. Through additional and extensive education efforts and the creation of alternative employment opportunities – for those residing around the Serengeti ecosystem – the groundwork for sustainable conservation, in Singita Grumeti Reserves (and beyond), has been laid. For full details on all the conservation and community initiatives that the Grumeti Fund has established, please see the sustainable tourism document on our website.
